

They both are Arrays and both are math.
X

Yes, you can model division and multiplication with arrays and these two things are both used in math.

Remember 3 related numbers are used to make related division and multiplication problems and division and multiplication are inverse operations.